

2 More Arrests In Navy Graft; Both Officers

Daniels Confers Over Telephone With Admiral Usher; Scandal Is Spreading

New Angle Is Found

Factories Alleged to Have Had Time Clock Punchers to Help Cost Plus Profit

A telephone conference on graft and bribery charges now pending against naval officers in this district was held last night between Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Usher, commandant of the New York district, and Major John F. Muir, in charge of the investigating work here. No statement could be obtained as to the result of the conversations, but sensational developments are expected to-day. Men in a position to know declared that "the whole thing probably would be ripped wide open" within a very short time.

Meanwhile, late last night, two more officers were placed under detention. The greatest secrecy surrounded these arrests, but it is understood that one of the men is a lieutenant commander, who owns six automobiles, and the other a physician who occupied a similar post to that of Lieutenant Davis, the charges against whom precipitated the present investigation.

The Scandal Spreads
At the same time the scope of the inquiry branched out beyond the boundaries of the 3d Naval District.

It spread beyond the boundaries of the 3d Naval District, into the navy yards of Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. The most sensational exposures in the navy's history are promised before the inquiry is finished.

Locally the new angles developed in the case led into the supply department and the alleged "labor graft" practised in factories producing clothing for the navy on a "cost-plus" basis. Many civilians are said to be implicated in these transactions.

Against civilians who may be found guilty in this connection the special staff from the judge advocate general's office which under direction of Major John F. Muir, is conducting the investigation would have no power to proceed, it was explained yesterday.

Caffey Will Prosecute

A full report of the investigators' findings is to be turned over to the Federal authorities, and United States Attorney Francis G. Caffey announced last night that he would prosecute to the full in the United States District Court here all civilians toward whom suspicion points.

Meanwhile the identity of the mysterious "R. J. E.," whose initials on an application for entry into the navy are said to have acted as such a magic charm on Lieutenant Benjamin S. Davis, was for the first time made public. He is Junior Grade Lieutenant B. J. Elliott, of the Bureau of Ratings.

The assignment of men within the 3d District was among Elliott's duties. Prior to his joining the Naval Reserve at the start of the war he had been in the regular navy. It is said that he at one time served as yeoman to Rear Admiral Usher, now commandant of the 3d District, and that he enjoyed the confidence of men high in the service. The theory is that the reliance placed on his judgment by his superiors gave Elliott large opportunities. He is now being detained on the L. S. S. Gracie State.

The total number now detained in this district in connection with the investigation is said to be forty-seven, forty yeomen and seven officers.

It was learned upon apparently reliable authority that Chief Commissary Jones, assistant to Chief Boatman's Mate Lloyd Casey, is among those held. Casey is the man mentioned in connection with an alleged payment of $10,000 by a New York merchant who wished to get his two sons out of the service immediately the war was signed.

The rumor that men higher up in the service than any yet mentioned would soon figure in the case became increasingly persistent yesterday. No official comment on this could be obtained.

Rear Admiral Usher refused to discuss the matter at all.

The investigation is being carried on independently of any office, he said. "When all the facts are in they will be turned over to me. Then I may have something to say. Till then I cannot discuss the subject for publication."

Morale Is All Right.
"I will say, however, that the morale of the Third Naval District as a whole is all right. People should make no mistake on that score."

The fact that the head of the Personnel Department of the Third District has been changing within the last fortnight has nothing to do with the present situation, Admiral Usher said. The former incumbent was taken sick, he declared, and will return when he is well. In the interim Captain Olmstead, the present head of the department, said he is still unfamiliar with the surroundings and knows nothing at all about the investigation.

An equally guarded attitude prevailed at the office of Major Muir, who divided his day between his headquarters at 280 Broadway and the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where the district court martial is sitting. Word has come from Washington, assistants of the major stated, that no further information can be given until it is certain that the men now under investigation cannot escape. Meanwhile attorneys of the service men is being concentrated on the new trails. One of the most interesting of these is said to lead to a well known downtown detective agency.

Thus far considerable doubt has surrounded the total amount of money involved in the alleged illicit transactions. Secretary Daniels has said that he believed it would be found to be comparatively small. Others in the navy with the situation have variously estimated it at $250,000 to $1,000,000.

Major Muir's operative staff in their investigation of this case, which one of the officers in the so-called inner ring is believed to have used as a collecting agency, the investigators yesterday was that of the "labor graft." This is said to have been worked by cost-plus manufacturers in the morning, punch a time clock and then quit for the day—with the government paying the percentage on their fictitious wages.

Meanwhile the private lives of the men now under detention are under investigation. Those who paid them money for the bullet-proof belts were also declared to have flown high along Broadway.

It developed that the assistant to Chief Boatman's Mate Lloyd Casey, of the Bensonhurst Naval Reserve Station (No. 6), who was said to have been detained with him on a charge of accepting "gifts" for official favors, is a commissary. According to officials at the Bensonhurst station, this man is reported to have acted as a go-between and to have received a huge gift from three sons of a wealthy merchant. Casey and the second enlisted man are now awaiting the action of the authorities at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

It was also learned that a chief yeoman of the Bensonhurst station was questioned by the naval authorities but was not placed under restraint. He was said to have been on close terms with Casey and the second enlisted man under arrest.

Seamen at this place say it was an easy matter to get a day's leave from a certain person for $10. One seaman related that he had not got a pool of $100 to ease their way out for a day. The money was given to the proper person, but he was transferred a day before they were to get away and they all left their money and their leave. This, however, they said, had happened under a previous administration.

Sailor Refused to Pay
A sailor on the S. S. Ranger said he wanted at one time to take an examination for promotion, and was told by an officer of the ship to go to a certain yeoman and get an appointment. The yeoman, he said, remarked: "Well, you know what the price is?" The yeoman then told him it would cost $5. The sailor said he refused to pay it, and didn't take the examination.

Ensign Beckwith, in charge of the naval censor's office, at 20 Broad Street, when confronted with the report that an advertisement in the intelligence service had never been called for active duty, through some mysterious influence, said no irregularities occurred in his department, as far as he knew.

"This department is not at all concerned in the present affair," he said. "We are in no way involved in the investigation, and I feel and hope that nothing will turn up that will affect us in the least."

Case of a Higher Officer

Navy officials refused to discuss the charges against a lieutenant commander at the head of one of the naval bases had been accused of forty-seven distinct offenses in affidavits sworn to by investigators. The commander, it is said, is still in charge of the base.

Officers in the Third Naval District said extraordinary efforts would be made by men suspected of implication in the matter to use political influence to keep their necks safe. For this reason it is believed that Major Muir may ask Secretary Daniels to appoint a special court martial to consider the cases developed during the present inquiry.

The court now sitting in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, it was learned, did not have a very active session yesterday, no cases involved in the current affair, it was stated, having been considered. The sittings will continue daily.

Big Campaign On To Push Firemen's Three-Platoon Bill

Churches and Labor Organizations Deluge Members of Legislature With Letters Urging Its Passage

ALBANY, Feb. 19.—An active and systematic campaign is being conducted in the interest of the Ramsperger firemen's three-platoon bill. The Senate Cities Committee, to which it was referred, is receiving bundles of letters every day, urging its passage. They come principally from churches and labor and firemen's organizations.

Senator John B. Mullan, of Rochester, the chairman, declared to-day that never before had legislation of this sort been so systematically pushed. He was asked if he had heard that in some cities firemen had threatened to strike if the bill was not passed.

"That has not come to my attention," he said. "The firemen have been very urgent in their demand for the bill, but their letters have contained nothing of a threatening nature. They claim that at present their hours are such that they have no home life."

"This bill will be given serious consideration and I shall call a hearing on it soon. I believe the firemen are justified in seeking this legislation, but there are of course two sides to the question."

Senator Mullan said the cost of putting the bill into effect would bring strong opposition from city officials. The state conference of Mayors is now gathering figures to show the increased taxation that would result. It has been estimated that if the firemen's bill and the Blackly police minimum salary bill for second and third class cities were enacted it would increase the tax burdens of the cities of the State by about $10,000,000.

As both the state and its cities are now facing a shortage in revenue the cost undoubtedly will prove a big obstacle in the way of the passage of the bill.

Most Discontented Body Of Municipal Employees

Joseph J. O'Reilly, editor of "The Chief," a civil service publication, issued a statement yesterday on behalf of the Ramsperger firemen's bill in which he declared that the present system is rendering the firemen the most discontented body of municipal employees in the state.

"The present system," he says, "involves twenty hours of duty each day, with irregular meals, suffering, peril and death, is a positive menace to the efficiency and morale of the department."

"In all state and city services the firemen alone have been excluded from the benefits of an eight-hour law. The police have a three-platoon law—why not the firemen?"

"Governor Alfred E. Smith has said that he believed a platoon system should be established for firemen. Mayor Hyman made the platoon system one of the issues on which the last municipal election was decided. The State Federation of Labor has recommended the establishment of an eight-hour day for firemen, and the firemen look to the public to aid them in this humane bill in the hands of the Governor."

Goethals to Quit as Buyer

Protests Competitive Bidding Among War Bureaus

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Major General Goethals, appearing before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in relation to legislation authorizing him to dispose of army cold storage plants, took advantage of the opportunity to tell the committee he expected to leave his post of chief of the division of storage and purchases on March 1, but that before he went he wanted to protest against the effort of the bureau of the War Department to do away with the division.

"They are solidly against me and in favor of the old bureau system of bidding against each other for army supplies," said the general.

"They want their jobs back," commented a Senator.

"Exactly so," answered General Goethals. "The old plan was wrong, and if we go back to it we will be caught unprepared in case of another war, just as we were this time."

The reorganization was made under the Overman law, and the House army bill purposes to reestablish the old bureau system.

In the Russo-Japanese war Baron Fukushima was on the staff of the Manchurian army under Marshal Prince Oyama. In 1902 he attracted attention by climbing the highest peak of the Altai Mountains in Mongolia.
